On 15 October 2026, at approximately 9:00 PM, Rahul Sharma and Amit Verma were arguing outside a shop in Delhi. During the argument, Rahul Sharma took out a knife and deliberately stabbed Amit Verma twice in the chest. Amit Verma suffered severe injuries and died at the scene. Rahul Sharma immediately fled from the location.

The investigating officer later recovered the knife from a location identified by Rahul Sharma. CCTV footage from a nearby shop showed Rahul Sharma approaching Amit Verma and stabbing him.

The prosecution alleged that Rahul Sharma intentionally killed Amit Verma. The defence argued that the incident occurred during a sudden quarrel and that Rahul Sharma did not intend to cause death.

The trial court found Rahul Sharma guilty of murder and sentenced him according to law.

The judgment also discusses several earlier Supreme Court decisions concerning murder, culpable homicide, sudden provocation, and intention. Those cases are cited only as legal precedents and do not concern the present incident.
